HOUSTON COUNTY HISTORICAL LIST--INTRODUCTION

The area, which is now known as Houston County, was one of the most progressive and prosperous areas in the state of Tennessee when the county was established in 1871. This progress was the result of diversified industrial development. Timber was cut for charcoal production and for the production of wood products (barrels, handles and lumber). The charcoal was used in the smelting of iron from the ore dug in the hills of the county. The charcoal was also used in the lime kilns. The barrels, which were made here, were used to ship the lime, tobacco, dried fruits and other produce. A cement plant also made use of the lime products. When the timber was cut from the land, this opened fields for grazing, crops and orchards.

There was a constant population of around 6,000 people during the years of 1871 to 1900. Who were these people who lived in Houston County during this time? We, in TOEC of Houston County High School, have attempted to identify as many of these people as possible. All of the names on the lists came from the records in the Houston County Court House in Erin, TN. The offices used were: Registrar of Deeds-Robin Reynolds; Tax Assessor-Woodrow Adams; County Court Clerk-Robert Brown. These county officials have been extremely helpful in assisting us with our search.

As with all old documents of that era, the handwriting was beautiful, ornate and almost impossible to read. Also, the various county officials of that era sometimes spelled the same name differently. We realize we too have made some errors in compiling the lists and alphabetizing them. You will notice many women of the county will not be listed because---if you did not own property, get married, pay a poll to vote, or pay a business tax, you are unaccounted for on these lists. Women of that era did not pay a poll tax to vote because it was illegal for women to vote in Tennessee at that time.

This group of lists was originally planned to be in one volume. However, there was too much material to bind at Houston County Printing Company. Rather than discard information, there had to be two volumes. We hope you will enjoy trying to find your ancestors and we also hope that this listing will encourage some group to compile a complete history of the county.

BRIEF HISTORY OF HOUSTON COUNTY

The following information is from INTRODUCTION TO THE RESOURCES OF TENNESSEE, J. B. Killibrew, Bureau of Agriculture for the State of Tennessee, Publisher-Havel, Eastman & Howell, Nashville, Tennessee, Date-1874. Permission was granted for use by Tenn. Dept. of Agric. Mr. George Houston Bateman (Houston County's unofficial historian) allowed TOEC to use his personal copy of the book.

Houston County was created by an act of the Legislature, January 23, 1871. On the 17th day of March, an election was held by fractions of the counties of Dickson, Humphreys, Stewart and Montgomery to ascertain the wishes of the people as to the formation of a new county. All fractions of the counties, with the exception of that of Montgomery, voted for the new county. The county, as now established, comprises about 340 square miles, and is named in honor of General Sam Houston, of Texas fame, but a native of Tennessee. Of the fractions 75 square miles were taken from Humphreys county, 28 from Dickson and the remainder from Stewart . . .

After the survey and the report of the commissioners, the people met at Erin on the first Monday in April. . . and completed the organization by the election of a Chairman of the County Court. Twenty Magistrates, representing the ten districts in the county were qualified, as well as the County and Circuit Court Clerks. The county contains about 6,000 people, and has a voting population of 910. . .

This county is traversed by a high, bold ridge running north and south, known as Tennessee Ridge. It is a water-shed between the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. . . Yellow Creek and White Oak furnish good water privileges. . . There are situated on White Oak three good mills and on Yellow Creek are two good mills. . .

A very interesting geological phenomenon occurs in this county, in the Well's Creek basin. This is an area, nearly circular, containing six or seven square miles and touching the Cumberland River. Well's Creek runs through it. The rocks in the basin dip at a very great angle, and in some places are nearly vertical. There are evidences of a terrible subterranean convulsion at one time. . .

Some of the best building stone in the State occurs within a few hundred yards of the county seat. . . It is a compact limestone, heavily bedded with vertical fissures, and is quite soft when first taken from the quarry but hardens by exposure to the air. When dressed, it is a subdues, white color, with sparkling crystalline particles. . . At this quarry is manufactured a large quantity of lime. Four hundred and fifty barrels are made and shipped every three weeks. The lime is burnt in a kiln with the above capacity. It sells, delivered on the cars, at $1.25 per brl. The barrels are made in a factory on the spot. The prive of staves already dressed and delivered is $10 per thousand, one thousand making sixty barrels. Hoop poles sell for $6 per thousand, that number serving for fifty barrels. The cost of cooperage is 14¢ per barrel. At Stewart's Station, lime is also made and sold in large quantities. Indeed, lime furnished one of the chief articles for export from this county...

Wheat, corn tobacco, potatoes, oats, etc. grow well; but the land is better adapted to the growing of grasses than any other crop. Herds-grass and clover grow admirably well on the rolling hills while timothy is becoming a favorite crop with those who own bottom lands. On bottom farms the average yield of corn is forty bushels, wheat is twelve, peanuts is thirty-five. The uplands are better for tobacco than the lowlands. The yield per acre is not as great but its money value is greater. Land may be bought at almost any price up to fifty dollars per acre... Labor is scarce. Farmers rely upon their own strong arms and live within their means, consequently, there are but few grumblers. Very little land is rented, and little good land is for sale.

Fruits of almost all kinds grow well. Peaches are becoming a favorite crop. Seldom is this fruit destroyed by late frosts. The peculiar meteorological conditions of the atmosphere, induced probably by the numerous streams and the rolling surface of the county. One of the finest peach orchards in the State is two miles from Arlington, the county seat. It is situated on the Tennessee Ridge. The soil is clayey and gravelly... 5,000 peach trees were set out in the fall of 1867, and the first crop was gathered in 1872. The first peaches from this orchard reached the Chicago market on July 6, 1872. 11,491 pounds of peaches were shipped by rail from Erin that year... It is the intention of the proprietor to increase the orchard by setting out 10,000 additional trees...

Among other articles of export are ginseng, dried peaches and apples, chickens, turkeys, eggs, butter, wheat, corn, tobacco, potatoes, liquor, cattle and sheep... 900 pounds of ginseng were gathered for the year 1873...

On the North-west Fork of Well's Creek is the seat of the old Ashland Furnace, which manufactured iron before the war with great success. Eclipse Furnace was located on Hurricane Creek. Union Furnace was on Thomas Branch of Well's Creek... These furnaces procured the ores immediately around their sites. The timber supply for the production of charcoal is being consumed around these sites at the rate of 500 acres per furnace annually... There are good prospects for ore in many portions of the county...

Several families from Pennsylvania have come to the county since the war, and still remain in perfect accord and sympathy with the people and are highly respected...

Among the first acts of the County Court of Houston, after its organization, was to levy a liberal tax for the support of common school, and there is scarcely a county in the State where a more liberal feeling prevails on the subject. There is a common school in nearly every district and excellent private schools at Erin and Arlington. The school tax was 25¢ on each hundred dollars worth of property, one dollar on polls, fifteen dollars on each tippling house, five dollars on each merchant and one dollar on each marriage license... The scholastic population in Houston County in 1873 was 1,233 children between ages of 6 and 18...

Arlington, the county seat, has but one business house. Erin, one mile east on the railroad, is quite a thrifty village that has been built up since 1870. It has a population of 500, four stores, one grocery, one drug store, one shoemaker shop, one saddler's shop, two hotels, several boarding houses, one church and two schools. It has also a machine shop and the foundation has been laid for building a round house for the railroad...

Cumberland City and Danville are the shipping points and convenient to the railroad and the river. Cumberland City has a population of 300 and Danville about half that number. They have four or five business houses each. Stewart's Station, nine miles west of Erin, has two or three business houses.

Few counties have better facilities for transportation. The Cumberland River bounds the north-eastern border, the Tennessee River the western, while the Louisville, Nashville and Great Southern Railroad passes from the one river to the other through the center of the county. The County is free of debt, and the citizens are apparently contented and happy.
